The WBAI Folio is not sold, it is sent free to each subscriber to the station. The program listings are published every month as a service to subscribers who support our non-profit, noncommercial station at the annual rate of $24.00 (student and retired persons subscription rate: $15.00 a year). All donations are tax deductible and checks should be made payable to "Pacifica-WBAI."

WBAI is on the air from 7:00 a.m. to c. 4:00 a.m., Monday to Friday, and 8:00 a.m. to c. 4:00 a.m., Saturday and Sunday. Our transmitter is located in the Empire State Building and we broadcast with an Effective Radiated Power of 5.4 KW (horizontal) and 3.85 KW (vertical). Power equivalent to 50,000 watts at 500 feet. Antenna: 1223 feet above average terrain. Height above sea level: 1515 feet. Frequency: 99.5 fm. The studios and offices are located at 359 East 62nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10021. Phone: (212) 826-0880.

WBAI is owned and operated by the Pacifica Foundation, a non-profit corporation. The other Pacifica stations are KPFA, 2207 Shattuck Ave., Berkeley, California 94704; KPFA, 3729 Cahuenga Blvd., Los Angeles, California 91604; and KPFT, 618 Prairie St., Houston, Texas 77002. Subscriptions are transferable.

The duration of programs scheduled is approximate. The dates after listings indicate past or future broadcast. The program listings are copyrighted (Copyright 1972, WBAI) and are not to be reprinted without written permission. Extracts may be reprinted for highlight listings. "Pacifica" and the dove are trademark, 1972.

LETTERS

Labyrinthine Transmogrifications

Dear Mr. Goodman,

I am writing this letter on a bright, luminous morning, with a pot of bubbling Jamaican Blue by my side and an irresistible urge to put some thoughts on paper about my favorite station, BAI.

Actually this is prompted by the elocution of a young man hosting the morning music program; an unknown person, thus far, but after knowing what it was to generate this epistle, he will, no doubt, become known: For can there be more than one such zealot on your station?

I refer to his pronunciation of the French language. It is palpably perfect! One must acknowledge the elocution-advances he has made. But those of us less-advantaged mortals, who were not given to scale the heights of Elysium this aristoi had such obvious access to, can't understand a thing he says!

Actually, this bourgeois snobbery is a creeping epidemic at BAI. Are you aware of it? Is anyone there aware of it? At one time I was able to relate to Charles Pitts' righteousness. Having gone the same route as he, I felt a gratitude toward anyone, no matter how saintly, for exposing the dementia a civil society suffered in its private moralities. His halo, as was noted in the prescient Folio, was there. But considering the state of the union, one could urge a critic to hoist himself on his own petard. Thus are some closets come to be illumined. In any event, he was the only saint we had, so one flew too!

But then along came Paul Gorman! He makes Pitts look grundgy, and the frenchman (?) a mere toddler. No self-doubt with mr. cheese as he wends his merry way through labyrinthine transmogrifications. Forays to Caswell-Massey, gurgles, slurps, ennui and bathos, hyperborean yearning for Shawangunks; must all be of interest where "secret armies of naked women wait" to greet them with perfervid religiosity. And his sense of achieving can be matched only by those heros whom he cultivates with assiduous com-post. One day I was going to experiment, and count the number of times Gorman used the terms 'I', 'me', 'my', or their pluralities. After 30 minutes I drowned in the superfluity of his ego, and surrendered to his greater stamina in this matter.

One accepts this approach in the interest of reaching all segments of New York civilization which demands this self-gratification (or-mortification). When however this form of lollipop sucking is combined with retreat into a mysticism replete with promises of pomegranates, one wonders why the hypocrisy isn't recognized as the shuck white, middle-class kids take, along with drugs, for an antidote to the "wicked" society "they" are always creating? Someone ought to awaken Gorgonzola. A better mouse-trap might not be built by anyone else, and the big G, while pontificating, might get caught by the loose mouse with his pants down. The sad part of this is that Gorman does show, once in a while, he is capable of so much better. Why then must he sink into juvenescence with so much pap?

Ah, Julius Lester! Why did you wander off in that fog just when we need you?

Oh, Josephson, Fass, Post! Your insanities are the only sanities in the self-traducing morass BAI is slowly becoming.

Ah, music department! Where is the elan and ease you are sometimes able to manage?

And to Fischer, Soloway, Kuttner, et al; the thanks of a drowning man, for throwing him a straw when others push down.

O, Moby, Moby, . . . don't race away so fast! Let BAI catch you, and you can both ride that sunbeam!!

Oh well, back to deciphering the francophile. Thanks for listening to me. The coffee is finished now and I must be on my way.

Thank You Julius Lester

Dear Julius,

January 19, 1972

Now that you are no longer on the air on Tuesday I write my letter of appreciation. Unfortunately I didn't hear last Tuesday's program when you must have explained why you are not continuing the show. I hope that it was only because you have other commitments, and not because of some difficulty with the station. But you can never tell about WBAI.

Whatever the reason I will say that I will miss the program. In fact, although sometimes there were a few things I didn't dig, most of the time I thought you were exactly right. Two or three of your programs come back to me which were some of the best I have ever heard. There was one last year, or even maybe longer ago, that was only music. You did some real down-home stuff and then you swung into some African stuff, and the transition was so clear. You never said a word about it, but you didn't need to. All the unsaid things were in the music you played. Then there was another program where you interviewed a man who had spent ten years in prison and had been a junky. That was one really good piece of interviewing. And on that same program you also talked to a musician who had been to North Africa and had listened and played with musicians there. His impressions of Africa, etc. were just great. Your relaxed style and little nudges were just right.

But, of course, and here's where I really did miss you already, there was your morning show. I wonder if I was the only one who heard you so early. But your morning gig was just the kind of thing I think should be at on that time. Josephson, just ain't there! So now, I wish to thank you for all the informative and enjoyable moments you have provided over WBAI. And I may say the station will be much the poorer without you. It seems that I did hear a program produced by you about some city problems, like it was investigative reporting—unfortunately I did not tape it. (I tape many of those things to use in my classes at school), but I remember at the time that this is what WBAI should be into—forget all that howling at the moon, and get down to the things that are happening here and now and tell the facts, names, etc. Again I should have written at the time, I hope there will be more of those. I know there must have been a great deal of effort put into it, but it was really top notch—far beyond most of the programs found on WBAI or any other station in New York. In fact, it was much nearer some of the earlier journalism WBAI used to do down south in the early '60s. I hope you do more.

My very best to you in any of your future endeavors,
(Mrs.) Peggy Vranesh

STATION NOTES

You'll notice an absence of program listings on March 7. That's not because we've run out of programs, or program ideas, or because the typesetter lost the copy for that day. There are no programs listed for that day because, as the old story goes, WBAI needs your financial help. This time we're trying it in a slightly different way. Its called SUBSCRIPTION DAY. Sound dull? Well read further. SUBSCRIPTION DAY is not a marathon, not a minithon, microthon, or any other kind of thon. Our only goal for the day will be to recruit as many NEW SUBSCRIBERS as possible within a 24-hour period. To broaden our preferred means of support. Why do we prefer subscriptions over large or small donations? With enough subscribers (approx. 30,000) we could move away from crisis and deficit financing, such as marathons. Broad based listener support has kept WBAI alive and growing (if not thriving) for twelve years as a free and independent voice. We want to increase that support, strengthen the voice and insure WBAI's continued independence. And, by the way, we don't want to be six weeks behind in pay by May 1st, as has been the case over the past few years. Really, it's a matter of giving now to, hopefully, avoid desperation pleas. Ordinarily during fund raising drives we receive large numbers of contributions of less than the amount of a subscription. On this day we plan to put all contributions toward subscriptions because there is at least a 50% chance that subscribers will renew the following year without too much on-the-air badgering by the old BAI badgers. We intend to ask all contributors to become subscribers in one of the following ways:

1. $5 / 1/4 year subscription
2. $7.50 / 1/2 year student subscription
3. $12. / 1/2 regular subscription
4. $15. / student subscription
5. $24. / regular subscription

And now a word to those of you who have just breathed a sigh of relief because you've already "done it." You can stop here and make a note on your calendar not to listen to WBAI on March 7th. Or, you can help too, in one of the following ways: Give a gift subscription to a friend, poor student, prisoner, member of the military, an as yet unemployed vet, welfare recipient or anyone else who can't afford it. Or someone who can afford it but doesn't know she/he needs it—like your local politician, warden, school administrator, career officer, or rich person who doesn't know how to spend his money.

If all your friends and acquaintances already subscribe, we can channel your money toward one of our poor friends. If you can't afford to subsidize a full subscription, give us whatever you can, and we'll put it toward a subscription for someone else. The point is that on SUBS. DAY, all money will, one way or another, be funneled toward subscriptions. OTHER ALTERNATIVES: Sustaining Member $60. Friend of Free Radio $120. People still ask why. Why? Why? Why March 7th? Because it's Steffi's and Francie's mother's birthdays.

This month, we have made no major changes in our Regular Programming schedule, but we have added a number of new series. The Drama and Literature Department is producing NEW FORMS, a series on the visual arts. NEW FORMS will be a series of series within a series including segments on: videotape; the visual/plastic arts; Warhol, Reinhardt and the like, from the WBAI Archives; radio as art, produced in conjunction with E.A.T.; inner Cinema, discussion with artists and visionaries within the medium of film, hosted by independent filmmaker, writer and teacher, Jud Yalkut; and visual miscellany. The series is produced by Ruth Rotko and Terry Shtob and will be broadcast Mondays at 11:00 P.M. Another new series on the arts will begin this month: FEMINIST PERSPECTIVES ON THE ARTS, Wednesday, March 22, at 9:45 P.M. This program will cover the visual arts, music, theatre, poetry, with readings and reviews, all from a feminist point of view. The series is produced by Mimi Weisbord Anderson and Brett Vuolo. The last addition this month is a continuation of the series on Women's Diaries, produced by Brett Vuolo. This program, LETTERS OF A WOMAN HOMESTEADER: Elinore Pruitt Stewart, will be broadcast in three segments, Wednesdays, March 15, March 22, and March 29, at 10:15 P.M.

If God Had Wanted Us to Listen,

By Dan Kavanaugh

The last time the Music Dept. was asked to write anything for the Folio was exactly two years ago, when Eric Salzman put together a Manifesto entitled "Irving M. Everything." Actually, we know of no one by that name, nor was he even discussed much in the article. He, like John Q. Public, Harriet Hostess, and Freddy Fart, is simply the personification of some ideal or quality. The Game Plan. "Irving" was what we saw as a surefire plan for militant eclecticism. The Radio could and should be a great electronic meeting place for musics from all cultures and all ages. If Radio could be art, if art could be unpretentious and natural, if Radioart could be a broad, non-specific system, then we could create a living, moving service. If the live and canned can co-exist on the air, if anything (anywhere!) can be taped and played-back anywhere else, if musicians can play for you listeners with the knowledge that you're really there (alive and in need), and if Radiotechnology could be used as a tool, then the resources and materials were adequate. Finally, if contemporary art should provide social-political-cultural models for a better day to come, then a "Great Electronic Meeting Place" wouldn't be a bad idea at all.

We promised you Everything. Musicians coming and going, spending time in front of our microphones doing whatever it is they like. Works by people who have no knowledge of each other appearing side-by-side. The collected musical personality of Beethoven in near-totality. Ancient-romantic-rock-tape-Eastern-classical-jazzrock-new-birds-etc.-etc. Music wouldn't be a precious, consistently edited and discriminated commodity, but there would be lots of it, all the time—living and happening. And, in an occasional crescendo, we'd be sure to present our own "Chaos as a Program for International Harmony"—all of the above and more, in groups, simultaneous, together, just to see what it's like to mingle despite differences.

Speaking of Chaos. I should mention that two years ago, MORNING MUSIC meant playing a varied bunch of records without making any announcements. The FREE MUSIC STORE took place seven days a week, while actually getting on the air an average of three of those times. It often sounded like the mics were set up in an adjacent room from the concert. AT THE RISK OF SEEMING RIDICULOUS was new-born and blushing, but really no more than a vague plan to mix music and politics and the kitchen sink.

Those were practical and conceptual problems. I'll add that, in those days, it was a favorite WBAI pastime to attack the Music Dept. for its irresponsibility and childishness. But all-in-all, the Musidept. was exciting, air time was plentiful, and there was a sort of gold rush-raccoon cap flavor to it all.

Thousands Cheer! The "Irving" Manifesto was required reading in Music, and we took it seriously. MORNING MUSIC now provides a substantial answer to the need for good classical music programs, while remaining unique in its format and content. After several experiments, we realized that anything less than a long MORNING MUSIC would be tokenism. Now that the program is presented live, the several people who produce it, with their own personal tastes in mind, must listen to what you're listening to. MORNING MUSIC has a musical flow, a minimum of announcements or hype—it doesn't sound like a collection of museum pieces.

Not only does the FREE MUSIC STORE work these days—it's gotten better, more dependable, more alive. It has served as proof that artists and community can share in a musical experience without feeling nervous, ripped-off or phony. It's just that the programs, the atmosphere, and the communication are all determined by the performers and audiences whose involvement has made the FREE MUSIC STORE a people's institution within a people's institution.

The FREE MUSIC STORE has been joined by numerous other live and live/taped musical events and programs on the air. Techniques have been developed and equipment designed to bring you music as (or like) it happened. Music is neither as difficult nor as expensive as some people make it out to be. And commercial pre-packaging of music is giving way to a more natural style, because WBAI has made it happen.

Not Everything is Roses. I'm afraid that some of our ideas peaked long before we noticed. Like AT THE RISK OF SEEMING RIDICULOUS. All too often it involves a restatement of themes and theories we've expressed many times before.

Nostalgia, the plague of Pacifica, can sometimes be found creeping around the Music Dept., simply because of the difficulty in finding creations that are new, wonderful, and available. There's a deathly feeling that the Musidept., now (maybe just temporarily) an accepted member of the WBAI family, has become too much of a model for itself. And that brings us to the next topic. The New Boredom. I keep telling people that "the Music Dept. is not a bandwagon." Or, "Don't ask me, tell me,

Score by Dan Kavanaugh for The Great Pacifica Wireless Jamboree. Conceived and produced by the Music Department, April, 1971.

He Would Have Given Us Ears

what you should do." "It doesn't need to be explained. It needs to be heard." But alas, who listens? We love our well-oiled machine, and wouldn't give it up for the world. But where are the angry, outraged phone calls from listeners to music programs? How often do you hear something so original that you question, for a moment at least, its humanity? If the ears aren't continually tested and challenged, how well will they hear?

WBAI has a habit of always congratulating itself. You hear it on the Marathons; you see some of it in this article; if you attended our staff meetings, you'd probably get sick. It strikes me that this is somewhat of a personality defect, more of a problem than our "consciousness," communalism or style of relating to enthusiastic volunteers. The reason is that innovations can only happen in spite of this habitual, built-in safeguard. Producers group themselves in their departmental ghettos and practice the Protestant Ethic, just so no one will talk too much. Radio experience teaches us how to pre-judge creative ideas, not how to try them and let them happen. Productivity is defined as a kind of imitation. You'd be surprised what a "respectable" institution WBAI is, and how boring that (combined with your average paranoia and job insecurity) can be.

This all leads up to a confession that the Music Dept. has become a party to these habits. Without proposing some weird, behavioral, shock-treatment cure for satisfaction with satisfaction, I'd like to admit that we've been too happy with ourselves, and unhappy with the results. Something's Gotta Give. A solution to this problem needn't be complex. As much as we live and work on the inside of the WBAI institution, we have to be on the outside. For every word of congratulations received, we should expect (and even hope for) ungratulations, problems, surprises. The nature of work here is better left not too clearly delineated. Models for Radioart should be drawn from the broadest possible community and continually cooked up from scratch on the premises. The New Manifesto. It turns out that the new Manifesto is really no different from the old one. "Irving M. Everything" won't be in a truly worthy position of power until he's been installed as a member of the WBAI Local Board. Eclecticism is an unattainable goal, something you have to keep working toward. So, we're making some changes and introducing new things. . .

AT THE RISK . . ., beginning this month, is going to function as a sort of FREE STORE for media artists. The Music Dept. has had its say, and now you'll be hearing musicians, composers, record producers, and sound people giving you their ideas of what two hours of live-assembled radio should be.

As we leave our big Sunday night ghetto, the creative energies of the Music Dept. will be directed more towards the station's need for rhythm and diversity in programming. We'll be producing short programs of ten minutes or less for broadcast in the early evening (News and Public Affairs) sequence. The sources for these programs will be original and the sounds will be unique. These are, in effect, little radio pieces, intended more to be experimental and unusual than timeless and classical.

We're going to be experimenting freely with formats for more established programs—like the FREE MUSIC STORE, so if you hear things that sound strange, you'll know that we're always looking around for new ways of doing old things. Because we have to. And because so little is learned in the abstract.

And What About You? I'd like to finish by reiterating a long-standing invitation to musical artists. We need and welcome your involvement here—in any way that suits your needs and ideas. You can play at the FREE MUSIC STORE, on FREE JAZZ, on MORNING MUSIC. You can bring your tapes, and we'll broadcast them, or we'll do what we can to help realize your ideas.

WBAI exists to put people in contact with each other. And the Music Dept. is no more than one link in the culture of our community. It's a necessary part of communication and experience, and with your help we'll be a little satisfied (but not too satisfied).

REFLECTIONS ON LEAVING WBAI

By Julius Lester

On the evening of Tuesday, January 11, I announced that I was terminating my show, THE GREAT PROLETARIAN CULTURAL REVOLUTION, as of that evening. It was not a decision which was reached easily. Nor was it a decision which has brought me any happiness. Quite the contrary. It was one of those difficult decisions which one sometimes has to make, in spite of the fact that it brings more sorrow than joy.

The reasons for leaving are many and they can't be listed in a neat column. I don't live my life that way. Too, I am not yet sure of all the reasons myself. But I will try and say what I do know.

As many of you know, I am a writer. That is my primary means of relating to the world and all contained therein, i.e., a writer is not simply someone who writes. Writing is a way of life and only secondarily is it something which a writer does. Thus, radio was not central to my existence, because it was not the medium which I used as my primary means of relating to the world. It was a nice adjunct, but never more than that.

In the spring of 1968, I was asked to do a half hour program interviewing people in the radical movement. That was how I came to WBAI. The summer of '68, Steve Post went to the Pacifica station in Los Angeles and Bob Fass asked me to do his show one Sunday night. I did it, playing music and talking to people on the phone and there was a large response to the show. I continued filling in for Steve and when Bob got sick later in the summer, I did his show also. In the fall when they returned, a two hour and fifteen minute time slot was created for me and THE GREAT PROLETARIAN CULTURAL REVOLUTION was born.

At that time, the show filled a unique function. I was the only black with a radical political outlook with a regular show in NYC and I consciously tried to make the show a place where the black point of view could be expressed and heard. And I tried to do this in such a way that whites could listen without fear of being put down or ridiculed. Which is not to say that I didn't express my own anger at them and with them from time to time, but at least the show reflected, I think, a respect and even love for people; emotions which have been regrettably lacking in many blacks the past few years. This effort to be a bridge between blacks and whites was filled with unbearable tension at times. I felt an obligation to build a black audience. At the same time, I wanted to build a white audience. And the two audiences are very different. But, having valuable air time I felt that it was my duty as a black to do programs that would reflect black concerns and attitudes. A program producer is not in a position to do solely what he/she wants to do and many nights I had guests on the show with whom I disagreed, with whom I was bored, whom I did not like, but they were people who I thought had a right to the air waves and as a producer for WBAI, I would be less than responsible to allow my personal tastes and prejudices to be the only reason for not having a particular guest on.

One result of all this was that I became defined—I was a black militant. It was a definition to which I never wholly subscribed, but it was there. I could live with it fairly well until the summer of 1969 when I saw the radical political movement and the black movement heading rapidly toward the outer reaches of insanity. It was a trip which, if I were going to make it, I preferred to do in my own way. And I became less comfortable with accepting the definition of black militant. The summer of '69 was also when I discovered the Jefferson Airplane. I'm not sure what they gave me, but in Grace Slick and Marty Balin's voices and Jorma's guitar and Cassidy's bass, I found something which said that it doesn't have to be that way. And Margaret helped, too. I began to get back to the me which existed beyond the definitions of black and radical.

But there was the radio show to do every week. Well, said I, if Dylan can change and bring people with him, so can I. And slowly, I began broadening the show and while I lost some listeners, I gained a lot more, I think. For a while, all was well. I could feel space around me which allowed me to fly, but the ceiling was still there. It was further away, but still there and my black feathered head would crash into it and I would fall to the floor, dizzy, stunned and bewildered.

Maybe I'm not making sense. I'm trying to talk about what it is like to be viewed not as a person (which is all I am) but as a symbol, or a representative of a particular group or point of view. To have people expect anything of you other than that you be yourself, which is all you can really be. And no matter how fiercely I fought being considered anything except myself, it was a fight I could never win. For example, I love jazz, played it constantly on the show, but seldom do I listen to it at home. Bach is my roommate. "But," you may say, "it's your fault for not playing what you wanted to play." I wish it were that easy, but as long as there's this society which insists on imposing definitions—white, black—it isn't easy. To digress a moment: black, woman, white, old, young, man are all descriptions. Nothing more. But in this society, they are definitions which are used like pins to fasten butterflies to cardboard. One of my attributes is blackness, but that is not the sum total of my existence and I refuse to allow this society to make it so. If I must define myself, then I will say that I am—well, I am—the universe. But try as I might to live in that universe continually, I must live in this society, too.

So, I am black, a fact which only has personal meaning when I leave my apartment. When I'm at home, being black means that that's where some of my cultural & historical roots are. And it means the same thing when I go out, until I remember that black is other people's trip which they insist on putting on to me through racism, prejudice, discrimination. And in recent years, black has come to have a whole new significance for black people and any black who finds himself in a public position must contend with that. Because I had a radio show, because I am a writer, blacks feel that it is my duty to speak for them and to them. And for a while, I accepted that and tried to do that. But I want to live where if I can't fly toward the sky, I can at least see it and I found the house of blackness did not even have a skylight.

The show turned me into a "thing," despite my efforts not to be. To whites I was a black who didn't curse them out for breathing, who would listen to them. To others I became some kind of guru who exuded patience and gentleness. People would call up and tell me how great I was, which was nice to hear, but it wasn't what the show was all about. And after a while I began to wonder about all the compliments. Many of them were genuine and I appreciated them. Believe me. Yet, in the back of my mind, I wondered. People don't want to be challenged. They merely want to have their own existence confirmed. I mean, when people called up and said, "Julius, I think you're great. I really agree with what you said about such-and-such," they were really saying, you have confirmed my thinking, my being. Thus, I like you. And maybe there's nothing wrong with that, but it made me feel that I was being used, as if I were a piece of carbon paper. I don't doubt their sincerity, but I'm suspicious of their motives.

The summer of '71, I did Larry Josephson's show for two days a week while he was in Amsterdam and for the first time on the air, I flew! I had a ball and did the best shows since I'd been on the air. I didn't feel the pressure to play a role, to be a "thing." I could just be.

I tried to transfer the feeling to the Tuesday evening show, but I couldn't. At 8:30 on Tuesday nights I knew there were people tuning in to listen because they wanted something very particular which they had come to expect from me. More and more, I was unwilling to provide it. I didn't question their right to expect it I mean, I would be rather angry if I tuned in one night to see All in the Family, and Carrol O'Connor has decided he wanted to be Henry VIII that night.

I was aware that I had not made my Dylanesque transition. There were people who only wanted me to take phone calls, people who only wanted to hear me talk, people who hated me when I played music, but I persevered, trying to mix everything up enough to give everybody a little of what they wanted.

One night will always stay with me. We were still at 39th St. then and I was playing the record of whale songs and a young black girl called. "Julius," she began, "tell me something."

"What?"

"What are you playing?"

"Oh, these are songs of whales."

"Whales?" she exclaimed. "What relevance does that have to the struggle of black people?"

I paused for a moment. "None," I finally said.

"Then why are you playing it? We don't have time for that."

"Well, it's beautiful, and if we don't have time for it, then I'm afraid we're lost."

We talked for a long while, but she didn't understand that if you can't love whales, you really can't expect to make a revolution or change the world in any significant way.

Eventually, I guess I just got tired, tired of the pressures, the demands, the tensions, tired of exposing myself, of sharing myself, of being responsible for providing others with a unique experience every week from 8:30 to 10:45. So, it was time to leave. I had nothing else to say. I couldn't find the right limb on the tree from which to take flight. So, it was time to get out of the tree.

One more thing: There is another factor which played a small part in my decision, though I did not articulate it to myself until I talked with Kathy Dobkin the day after I quit. And that is this—WBAI is becoming a radio station. I used to think of it as a way of life and I can't anymore. It is becoming very professional and I sometimes wish we were all back at 39th Street, crammed together in a few filthy rooms bitching and complaining about everything. The programs are probably better now; they are definitely better produced; coverage of events and things is wider. Like I said, WBAI is becoming a radio station and I guess I don't adjust well to certain kinds of changes. In fact, I fear it sometimes. What you gain by it may end up giving you a lesser sum than the one with which you started.

This is only a feeling I have, one which cannot be supported by one shred of concrete evidence. Which doesn't mean that it isn't true. But I'm reminded of what happens to good organizations that start out in grubby store fronts, then move to good offices. What had been a wild, insane thing of beauty becomes rather staid in its new offices in which it stores all kinds of new presses and mimeograph machines to turn out leaflets and pamphlets that say less than those which were issued on the old A.B.Dick that broke down all the time. Buildings and rooms make us live the way they want us to, but we generally move to a new place thinking only of how much more space we will have and not what will this room and this building do to my life.

WBAI has become very popular. Perhaps too popular. Too many people like the station now. It gets mentioned in the New York Times and Post. It is becoming too ordered for me; it is becoming a radio station and I had begun to feel like an anachronism.

If my feelings are accurate, I don't think there's anything which can be done, because there is no one thing which can be pointed to as the problem. Growth and longevity bring their rewards and penalties. But as Jefferson pointed out about governments, maybe anything which threatens to become an institution should close itself up after twenty-five years, even ten, and then start again after a year or two.

And maybe that's some of what I'm trying to say about my show. Three years is long enough. I do not want to become a New York City "institution." I do not want to become a media figure, a literary personality or a thing of any kind. So, for all the reasons I've expressed and those I'm not aware of yet, maybe my leaving is merely an attempt to save myself from ossification. Perhaps the most important thing is that THE GREAT PROLETARIAN CULTURAL REVOLUTION existed. Now that it has ceased to, that is as it should be. Let it be.

FEEDBACK

By Bruce Soloway and The Network Project

Television and survival: three off-the-record quotes—

1. “opiate”—a program director describing content.
2. “Next to the hydrogen bomb, television is our most important weapon.”—a CBS executive.
3. “If they told me next week we were going to push leukemia, I’d do it.” —an ABC executive.

WBAI is a small radio station. We have a reputation for courage and controversy, but we’ve always worked within the limitations of a small staff, limited equipment, and almost no budget. We probe the truth, but we must choose subjects which we can handle intelligently within our limitations.

Most of us find serious fault with the national broadcasting networks. That’s why we’re here. But a solid journalistic inquiry into the vagaries of the national networks is beyond the capabilities of WBAI alone.

“Television is financed entirely by large corporations and the government. There is no diversity of sources, and there is no separation between sales and programming. The industry shapes the message. The medium is the market.”—Network Project

The Network Project is a small research-and-action collective which put itself together about a year ago. Among its goals were the decentralization of control over television programming, and the elimination of censorship in the mass media. Its strategy was to investigate the national television networks, to publicize the results of the research, and then to act on it. That’s not a small task for three or four inexperienced people with no money. Many people told them it was impossible.

“The American telecommunications system is characterized by concentrated economic power and centralized control over technology, transmission facilities, and programming.”—Network Project

The Network Project came to WBAI last summer, and proposed that a series of radio programs be produced, based on the results of its research. The Network Project and WBAI had a natural affinity for one another. Each had resources it could contribute to the other. The common goal was to pass along documented information about the structure and function of America’s most powerful medium of communication.

“The medium’s claim to the truth is based on its ability to transmit events ‘live.’ About eight percent of current television broadcasting is ‘live.’”—Network Project

Radio is a peculiar way to communicate information. It reaches many people, but its message goes by just once, and it is only heard, not seen. Deep, vast, complex subjects are difficult to convey on the radio. We decided that this project demanded two experienced producers, one who had worked primarily in communicating information, and another who had worked with the technical potentials of the medium.

“The audience is disintegrated. Responsibility is fragmented by corporate structure and personnel; is replaced by professionalism.”—Network Project

We at WBAI underestimated the depth of the Network Project’s message, and the Project underestimated the potential of radio. The programs demanded hundreds of hours of production time, from interviews to dubbing to editing to scripting to mixing. We shared the work more than we divided it. We all contributed ideas, and they flew back and forth and matured in what seemed like endless meetings. We think we have created a kind of journalism never heard before on radio . . . with a message which demands attention and understanding.

“The broadcaster, custodian of a public property (the air), is bound to serve the public interest, needs, and convenience. He does this now by selling his audience to maximize private profit.”—Network Project

The first four programs in the FEEDBACK series will be rebroadcast on four consecutive nights, beginning March 13, at 9:00 P.M. each night. Whether or not you watch TV, we ask you to listen and think about what you hear.

“Information, like income and ownership, is largely the prerogative of a dominant urban minority. Communication is thus just another item in the general structure of privileges restricted to the few . . .”—Luis Beltran S.

“A riot is the language of the unheard.”—M. L. King.

WOMEN'S DAY IN STUDIO C

By Nanette Rainone

Kate: My mother felt it her duty, as every mother does, to tell her daughter at the age of eleven or twelve what Tampax is for. One day I said, "Mummy, what is Tampax for?" She said, "I'll talk to you in a couple of days about that." I waited nervously for two days, and then I got together with my mother. She heaved a deep breath and started. She described to me very exactly what happened during sexual intercourse. I listened, and I was aghast. I've never been so surprised about anything in my whole life. I don't think I had ever seen a naked man, and the thought that in fact they had one of those was just brand new for me. When she was finished I said, "Mummy, why have people put up with that for thousands and thousands of years? Why hasn't anyone ever rebelled?" My mother said, "It would not have done any good."

Carol: I had several experiences with things like this. When I was about ten or eleven, I had a kidney infection. My mother took me to the doctor. He examined me, and when we came out into his outer office he said to my mother, "Have you told her yet?" She said, "No." and he said "I think it's a good time." Tell me what? I thought they were going to tell me I had two days to live or something like that. When we got home, I was sitting on the couch, and my mother said to me, "Well, dear, you're going to be going through a change." That was the end of the subject. I had no idea what kind of change, you know, whether I was going to turn into a frog or something when I reached eleven.

Kate: Why do mothers always do that? My mother always used to go in stores with me and she used to say, "Oh, look Kate, you have to look at her feet to see which way she's facing." Everyone thought that was just hilarious.

Carol: A more lasting impression which was given to me by my mother was by the purchase of feminine accoutrements. I remember going to a dance in eighth grade at which every girl was allowed to wear stockings. My mother had a fit, and I had to wear little tiny ankle socks, because this was my growing into a woman. She said, I was not old enough for the boys to look at me that way. I wondered what stockings did to one, and I thought, well, is it because they go up so far?

Kate: There is something about a mother learning how to humiliate her daughter in front of a saleswoman. Once a girl has learned how to endure pain which is the thing about these puberty rituals—they teach you how to endure pain, how to sit all night with a freshly chopped off head then so you'll be numb to pain when you're older. That's the whole psychological turnaround. And once you've learned to endure pain, then you're ready to derive pleasure from humiliating somebody else.

Sebern: So that it'll revert to your daughters, and it'll just go on and on and on.

The above excerpt is from a WBAI Women's Consciousness Raising program. Each of these programs has encouraged a number of women to think of forming their own CR group. But until now we have been unable to lend concrete assistance. Just facile suggestions like put a note up in your local supermarket or "ladies" lunchroom at work. Gather together 8 to 12 women and begin meeting in each other's homes. If the group can't get off the ground, call us back.

Now we are prepared to be more helpful. On Sunday, March 26 at 1 P.M. in WBAI's Studio C we will gather together all the women from the Metropolitan area who can make it down here (and we'll provide day care). We'll introduce you to women from your neck of the woods and talk about how to make a CR group work.

If a CR group works it means the housewife's syndrome, the female graduate student's depression, the career woman's anxiety and the old maid's lament will be shared and understood and the pain and oppression of being a woman will not "revert to our daughters." Join us on Sunday, March 26 at 1 P.M. in Studio C (359 East 62 St.).

LETTERS OF A WOMAN HOMESTEADER: Ethnore Pruitt Stewart. Readings of the letters of a young widow's experiences as a Wyoming homesteader in 1909. The programs are part of the continuing series based on women's diaries and letters. Produced by Brett Vuolo. (3/14), (3/21), and (3/28)

THE CRIME OF MARTIN SOSTRE. A dramatization of Vincent Copeland's book. Produced by Deloris Costello and Milton Hoffman. (3/30)

Martin Sostre. THE CRIME OF MARTIN SOSTRE. Thurs., 3/30, 10:15 P.M.

WHO IS MARTIN SOSTRE?

That is the question we hope to answer by presenting a dramatic production of the Vincent Copeland book, The Crime of Martin Sostre. Martin Sostre is a black man who opened a book store in the black community of Cold Springs, Buffalo. He was arrested, on the charge of selling heroin following a rebellion in this community. But his real crime was getting to the minds of black people and exposing them to the "real enemy." That is what the WBAI production is about . . . who is Martin Sostre and what is his crime?

HIGHLIGHTS

- 8:15 "WE ARE ATTICA". In order to end the Attica State Prison rebellion last September, State officials used rifles, shotguns, teargas, and helicopters, and killed over forty people. They explained their actions to the world through the mass media, and fixed blame on the inmates. At the same time, they locked the inmates themselves in segregation units and imposed a news blackout around the prison, thereby assuring that the prisoners' side of the story would not reach the public. The blackout is largely over, and inmates are now permitted to speak to reporters about events before and after the September rebellion. In this program, a group of inmates who participated in the Attica rebellion talk freely about its development and its aftermath. Produced by Bruce Soloway. (3-31)
